AI Daily

This is AI Daily. Today's edition covers 6 developments, with the key changes and primary source details.

GPT-6.1 Sol from OpenAI is now available on AI Gateway.

It improves on the GPT-6 model named S, O, L. The improvements cover coding, computer use, and professional work, including reading complex documents and carrying out multi-step workflows.

Today, Claude for Government is generally available for federal and state agencies.

The platform, which delivers Claude's coding and agentic work capabilities through a FedRAMP High authorized environment, has been in public beta since July . Claude for Government, from Anthropic, is now generally available. Early access is also now available for Claude Code CLI and Claude for Microsoft 365.

The desktop app is C, L, I, N, E. Version 0.0.39 fixes a blank window issue on Linux systems using NVIDIA's proprietary driver.

On Linux with the proprietary NVIDIA driver, the app window no longer opens blank. The app now turns off WebKitGTK's DMA-BUF renderer when it detects the NVIDIA driver. To keep that renderer on, for example, on a hybrid GPU system, set WebKit underscore disable underscore D M A B U F underscore renderer equals zero.

NVIDIA VSS Blueprint 3.3 supports natural-language search, visual Q&A, verified alerts, and automated reporting for live and recorded video.

The NVIDIA Metropolis Blueprint for Video Search and Summarization (VSS) 3.3 connects vision-language models such as NVIDIA Cosmos, LLMs such as NVIDIA N, E, M, O, T, R, O, N, retrieval-augmented generation, and Model Context Protocol tools to turn live and recorded video into natural-language search, visual Q&A, verified alerts, and automated reporting. The Build Vision Agent skill composes multi-workflow deployments from a single prompt, starting from one of four validated developer profiles and adding only the services a requested capability actually reaches while converging shared infrastructure such as Kafka, Redis, and Elasticsearch onto single instances.

Amazon RDS now adds full snapshot size information to the Console and API.

AWS says the full snapshot size is the total size of all blocks stored directly in a snapshot and all blocks referenced from previous snapshots. The AWS announcement is dated September 29, 2026. It describes full snapshot size information in the Amazon RDS Console and API. Amazon RDS now displays the full snapshot size for RDS Snapshots.

O L L A M A now supports decision models.

Decision models return choices, probabilities, and scores instead of text. Use them for tasks such as ticket triage, model routing, and content classification.

Watch for Anthropic to announce general availability of its coding command line interface and Microsoft 365 tools, which are currently in early access.
